Hanauer is a venture capitalist and entrepreneur who has been a vocal advocate for progressive economic policies. He co-founded Second Avenue Partners, a venture capital firm that invests in early-stage technology companies. He is also the founder of Civic Ventures, a non-profit organization that works to promote economic justice.

In Bottom Up Revolution, Hanauer argues that the current system is not working for most Americans. The gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider, and the middle class is shrinking. He blames this on a number of factors, including the decline of unions, the rise of automation, and the globalization of the economy.

Hanauer proposes a number of bold policies to address these problems. He calls for raising the minimum wage, investing in infrastructure, and expanding access to healthcare and education. He also argues for a wealth tax and a financial transaction tax.

Hanauer's book is a timely and important contribution to the debate about the future of the American economy. He offers a clear and compelling vision for a more just and sustainable future.
