

Happy Kappy the Flying Kangaroo Who Could Hop No More Without Our Tails

Once upon a time, there was a kangaroo named Kappy who loved to hop. He was the fastest and highest jumper in the whole outback. But one day, Kappy had a terrible accident. He landed wrong and hurt his tail.

Kappy was devastated. He couldn't hop anymore! He tried and tried, but he just couldn't do it. He was so sad that he didn't want to do anything. He just sat in his pouch all day, feeling sorry for himself.

But Kappy's friends wouldn't let him give up. They knew that he was a special kangaroo, and they were determined to help him hop again. One day, Kappy's friends came to visit him. They had an idea.

"Kappy," said one of his friends, "we know you're sad, but we're not going to let you give up. We're going to help you fly again."

Kappy's friends each took hold of one of his ears. Then, they started to run. Faster and faster they ran, until they were running faster than the wind.

And then, something amazing happened. Kappy started to fly! He flew up into the air, higher and higher, until he was soaring above the clouds.

Kappy was so happy! He had never felt so free before. He flew all around the outback, showing off his new flying skills.

But then, Kappy started to get tired. He had been flying for hours, and his friends were starting to get tired too. They needed to land soon.

Kappy looked around for a place to land. He saw a big, green meadow in the distance. He flew towards the meadow and landed softly in the grass.

Kappy's friends were so happy to see him land safely. They ran up to him and gave him a big hug.

"Thank you," said Kappy. "I couldn't have done it without you."

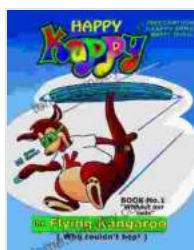

Kappy and his friends spent the rest of the day playing in the meadow. They ran and jumped and played hide-and-seek. Kappy was so happy to be able to hop again, and he was so grateful to his friends for helping him.

From that day on, Kappy never forgot the importance of friendship and teamwork. He knew that he could always count on his friends to help him, no matter what.

And Kappy never stopped flying. He flew all over the outback, spreading joy and happiness wherever he went.

The End
