Grants are free money that does not need to be repaid. They are typically awarded based on financial need or academic merit. Some of the most well-known grants include the Pell Grant and the Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG).

Scholarships

Scholarships are also free money, but they are usually awarded based on a specific set of criteria, such as academic achievement, extracurricular activities, or financial need. There are thousands of scholarships available, ranging from small, local awards to prestigious national scholarships.

Fellowships

Fellowships are typically awarded to graduate students or researchers who are pursuing advanced degrees or conducting research. They often provide a stipend, tuition coverage, and other benefits. Fellowships are highly competitive, but they offer substantial financial support for students who are dedicated to their studies.

Other Financial Aid Programs

In addition to grants, scholarships, and fellowships, there are a number of other financial aid programs available to students, including:

* Student loans: Student loans are a type of borrowing that allows you to pay for your education over time. There are different types of student loans available, with varying interest rates and repayment terms. * Work-study programs: Work-study programs allow you to earn money while you attend school. You can work part-time on campus or in the community, and your earnings can be used to help pay for your education. * Payment plans: Payment plans allow you to spread out the cost of your tuition and fees over a period of time. This can help make your education more manageable and affordable.
